JOHN WILKES BOOTH.

An Anthentic History of the Capture of J. Wilkes Booth, at the "Garrett" Farm, in Caroline County, Virginia. The Fredericksburg Herald publishes the following account of the capture of Mr. Boyd, alias J. Wilkes Booth. It is from the pen of Mr. Richard H. Garrett, of Caroline county, Va., at whose house Booth was captured and killed:

On or about the 20th day of April, 1865, report was brought to Richmond, that President Lincoln had been shot and killed, in a theater in Washington city, by an actor, whose name was supposed to se Booth, but no circumstances attending the murder were stated. On the 23d of April, I heard the report confirmed by a gentleman from our section who had been to Richmond, and he stated that it was reported in Richmond that Mr. Seward and Vice President Johnson had also been killed. On the 24th day of April, about 4 o'clock P. M., three men rode up to the edge of my yard. I went out to them and they were all strangers to me. The one that was in front introduced himself to me as Capt. Jett. He then introduced the two men to me, the one as Lieutenant Ruggles, and the other as his friend Mr. Boyd. He stated that Mr. Boyd was a Confederate soldier who belonged to General A. P. support of the Usion and Disparen by the Hill's corps, that he was hadly wounded in the leg below Petersburg, a few days before the surrender of our army, that he and Lieutenant Ruggles were going on a little scout toward Richmond to see how natters were getting on, and that his friend Boyd was suffering so much from his wound that he could not accompany them on horseback, and that he would thank me to take care of him till Wednesday morning, at which time they would cal for him. As it had always been one of the principles of my religion to entertain strangers, especially any in distress, I at once consented and promised I would do the best I could for him. I found when he alighted from the horse he was on crutches, and could not put one of his legs to the ground. He went with me to my house,
